GENTLEMAN of Congress, the trouble down South is that you never made rebellion a crime! Your Southern associates now threaten a new rebellion because they never were punished for the old. How do you like the bravado of the Gordons and Saulsburys flung into your faces before the scars are fairly healed? Perhaps a few more such exhibitions as that of yesterday will shape a policy that will last until it Appritional and more accurate information from New Orleans develops the fact that the Democrats themselves deliberately planned to have "the troops called into the State-house on Monday last. Their object was, according to the New Orleans correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, to gain a point "against Republicanism in 1876." In other words, they desired a condition of affairs which required the interference of the General Government, and then to appeal to the country on account of that interference, characterizing it as tyrannical and arbitrary. Their next step will be to organize a Rump Legislature and tender a gracious recognition to Dr. McEnery as Governor and the revolutionary Penn as Lieutenant Governor. Then we shall have two contending governments in the State, and Congress will not besitate to recognize the one with Governor Kellogg at its head as lawful, and entitled to the strongest support of which the General Government is canable.

THE New York Times of yesterday undertakes to read Gen. Sheridan a lecture upon constitutional law, but, in so doing, necessarily apologizes for the White League murderers, whom Gen. Sheridan very properly characterizes as "banditti." The Ku-Klux of 1870-'71 were suppressed by an act of Congress, enforced by the United States courts, with the aid of United States troops. No one now sheds any tears over the blood thirsty and inhuman wretches who are expiating their crimes in the Albany penitentiary. White Leaguers, arming and drilling in secret for political purposes, are an insurrectionary body in every sense of the word, and Congress clearly has the power to provide for their summary suppression. The plca of the Times that they have always respected the authority of the United States is the baldest falsehood conceivable. The Times knows better, and stultifies itself in uttering such reckless misrepresentation. The White Leagues of Louisiana and Alabama have never respected the authority of the United States, save when they believed they were going to be whipped! But what more could be expected of the editor of the Times, who has had to plead the privileges of an alien to avoid jury duty. Republicans are asked to accept the teachings of this unnaturalized Englishman, who is offended against the whole Republican party because President Grant chooses to no longer invite him to dinner! Will Mr. George Jones never get his eyes open to the treachery and deceit which this impostor is still practising upon him? If he could only see how Republicans in and out of Congress sneer at and spit upon the poor Times, and prefer for their daily reading even the Tribune and the World, with all their sins upon their heads, he would perhaps wake up from the stupor into which he seems to have fallen, shake off the poisonous presence that has so long enveloped him, assert his own convictions once more, see his subscription list increase, and his paper reinstated in the affections of the Republican party. Let Mr. Jones, for whom all our leading Republicans still have sincere personal respect, cast out his whole foreign crew, his Jenningses, and Garzimkis or Spooners with all their other disreputable aliases, and replace them with men who have convictions and can tell the

THE REBEL ATTACK ON THE

PRESIDENT. The discussion evoked by the Thurman resolution and its tone is of a character to set the leaders of the Republican party to thinking. We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that at the late elections the Democracy obtained a victory, no matter how barren it may be considered by Republicans. that has served to arouse a spirit of lawlessness all over the South. The attempt made in Louisiana to seize the government of that State, and the recent overturning of a State government in Arkansas in violation of all law, if left unchecked and unrebuked, may well be regarded as precedents for the Democrats to follow in MIssissippi and South Carolina. The question now before the Senate is not so much whether the information asked by the Thurman resolution shall be furnished as it is whether the Fresident and General Sheridan shall be sustained in the course pursued in Louisiana. It appears very plainly, from the tone of the discussion indulged in by the Democracy, that the resolution was introduced as a pretext to make on attack on the President. The question, as the matter now stands, is, shall the President be sustained? If the debate had been confined to the resolution and its search after information it is not of such a character as to demand any extended discussion; but its advocates have gone beyond this, and under the pretext furnished by the resolution denied to him the authority it is claimed he exercised. Ordinarily condemnation follows an ascertainment of facts, but in the present case the condemnation comes before a demand for the facts has passed into the form of an authoritative demand.

The attack in the present instance comes from that class of men who during the early days of the rebellion, could find no warrant or authority in the Federal Constitution to suppress the rebellion, or coerce a State that attempted to secode from the Union. It comes from a class that could discover such weaknesses in the General Government as gave a license to rebellion. bet that had neither the canacity nor patriotism to find any power or authority in the Constitution of the United States to either perpetuate or maintain itself. It comes from that class who, believing in the right of secession, took up arms to destroy the Union, or from that other class, who being traitors at heart, lacked the physical courage to take up arms in support of the doctrines they advocated.

Why this attack? Ordinarily men are the paper money or specie paying schools not assaulted and maligned unless they have Perhaps their willingness to compromise committed some act that merits it. Is this true in the present case? The President is charged with preventing a body of men from usurping one of the branches of the legislative department of a State government. Who were usurpers? No one claims that the five persons ejected from the bar of the House were members of the House of Representatives of Louisiana under the constitution and laws of that State. Was it a crime to prevent such an usurpation? We think not. These Louisianians need a lesson taught them. The spirit of the rebellion is entirely too rampant in that part of the country. In fact it is too rampant all over the South. If it is not checked, and checked at an early day, the time is not far distant when every Republican will have to betake himself north of Mason and Dixon's line and stay there, or content himself with being a hewer of wood and a drawer of water. The condition of affairs at the South demands the immediate attention of indorsement of the violence already perpetrated and license for its continuance. What remedies should be applied is not for us to say in this article, but if Congress be in doubt during the time it is maturing the proper legislation let it authorize the President to pursue the course suggested by Gen. Sheridan in his dispatch to the President. Some such measure is needed in order to restore peace, and, believing that Sheridan's plan would bring it about, we heartily indorse it and recommend the same to the careful consideration of Con-

THE U. S. TREASURY AND .THE

BROKERS. The fact that there are from three t five millions of taxes now in the Treasury which have been collected in the shape o duties on imports, and which have been paid by the consumers of the country, but which are in danger of being abstracted through the medium of appeals from the decisions of the collectors and divided among certain classes of non-producers, yelept custom house agents, attorneys and brokers, has attracted the attention of the Committee of Ways and Means, and will be inquired into with a view to ascertain what part Treasury officials are taking to aid in the nefarious project. It is believed by leading members of Congress that it is the duty of public officers and employees who are subordinate to the heads of Departments of the Government to perform their duties as directed by those responsible heads, and that it is highly improper for them to receive one salary from Gov ernment to protect and defend its interests and at the same time by treachery and connivance lend aid through their official positions, by giving information or otherwise, to those parties who are attempting to re cover money from the Treasury in defiance of the rulings of its officers.

They are right about this. It is the labor of the country which pays these taxes The duties levied and paid by the importer in the first instanc, care added to the cost of goods and repaid by the consumer. If any portion of those duties is refunded to the importer months afterwards, it only goes to swell his profits and to enrich the non-producing classes (brokers, &c.,) above mentioned. It is highly important that rulings should be just in the first place, but it is far more important that being just, they should be considered permanent and final unless changed by the courts or Con-and properly endeavored to give as definite construction and interpretation as practi cable to the laws in force, or which it emed to be in force on the 1st of Decem ber, 1873. In promulgating this revision the Secretary of the Treasury, in his circular, clearly defined the duties of customs officers under it. Brokers, agents and attorneys, in the names of various Importers. and frequently without either the knowl dge or authority of the latter in the respective and specific cases, but upon genral permission, with an agreement for liberal contingent fee for their reward, have filed about ten thousand appeals from the decisions of the collectors of customs. Each of these appeals forms the basis of a claim or suit against the Government for a refund of duties. Some of these cases in volve large amounts. If, however, they should average $500, which is not an extravacant estimate, the whole basket of olden plums would reach the value of $5,000,000. If the average should be but $300 the aggregate would be only $3,000,-000. It is said that the contingent fee usually agreed upon is 50 per cent.

In revising the code Congress very wisely

It is clear that here is a corruption fund then, of $1,500,000 to $2,500,000 which it s proposed to filch from the Treasury of he people, which has been paid in by the labor of the country, for distribution among the non-producing brokers, agents and attorneys and their aiders and abettors official and unofficial. This is the equity side of the whole case The Secretary of the Treasury has set his face against the refunding of these duties, so far as he has decided upon them, as ille gal. As lacking equity he has determined them all adversely. He has also determined that he will not be overruled by his own subordinates upon these questions if he knows it. He is supposed to know someting of law and to have pretty correct knowledge of human nature. When he sees a moderate salary and a sense of duty the only incentives upon the side of the Government and a prospective corruption fund of two and a half millions in the opposite scale, he is most likely to weigh the arguments and evidence very closely before paying out the money. We have no doubt that Congress will exercise similar wisdom and discretion in its inquiries and decisions. THE SENATE FINANCE BILL. It is well known to those who have taken the trouble to watch the tenor of the numerous articles which have appeared from time to time in these columns upon the subject of specie payments that the provisions of the Senate bill now before the House do not comport with our views of what is needed. We have advocated the simultaneous adoption of free national banking and coin redemption of legal tenders. We have proposed redemption at an earlier date than is named in this bill-July 4, 1876, instead of January 1, 1879and have urged the retention of coin in the Treasury for this purpose until the surplus over the contributions to the sinking fund and the payments of interest upon the public debt should have reached one hundred millions, which we believe would be sufficient to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to carry out the project of coin redemption. We have contended also for other provisions which are not necessary to be repeated now. We are fully satisfied, however, that we shall not be able to convince both Houses of Congress that we possess all the financial wisdom in the nation. There are many members who still cherish opinions of their own, and we do not doubt that they entertain them just as honestly and sincerely as we can possibly cling to those we have advocated. We recognize in the Senate bill an effort on the part of the Republicans to harmonize conflicting views upon the subject. It is an effort which reflects credit upon the party. The Senate bill is, therefore, all things considered, the best measure of finance that can be expected to pass Congress at the present session. It does not entirely satisfy the extremists of either upon it is the best evidence of its general soundness. It recognizes the importance of redemption of legal-tenders in coin, and fixes a date for its accomplishment. It recognizes the principle of free banking, and allows it to go into immediate operation. It provides for the humediate redemption in silver coin of nearly fifty millions contraction of eight tenths as much greenback circulation as may be added to the issues of the national banks until the volume of $300,000,000 of the former is reached.

We are bound to confess that this is a fair compromise of the conflicting views of the members of the party, and we think the bill should be passed at once, without further discussion, in the same spirit which secured its introduction into and passage by the Senate. It is to be hoped that every Republican will be in his place in the House to-day when the bill comes up, Congress. Inaction or delay is simply an and, refraining from controversy, strive in every legitimate way for its immediate passage.

> THE DUTY OF REPUBLICANS. It is becoming daily more evident that the Democratic policy this winter is to be simply factious opposition to the Repubheans. No definite principles are to be announced. This is not only indicated by the course of the Opposition press throughout the country, which teems with misrepresentation and abuse of the Republican Administration and the prominent members of the party in both Houses of Congress, but the fact is fully sustained by the Democratic speeches and tactics of the Democrats in Congress. The conspicuous features of the proceedings are obstruction of legislation by the introduction of irrelevant matters into the debates upon the army bill in the House and the dogged attempt on the part of Senator Thurman in the other branch to menace and insult the Executive by an unwarranted, unwarrantable and unprecedented breach of etiquette in the wording of a resolution for information. The manner and persistency of this latter effort justify the belief that the peculiar phraseology of the resolution was the result of a deliberate plan to insult the President, and not a simple piece of inadvertence. The Senate has no constitutional right to demand such information of the Executive.

The Republicans should now be fully convinced that they must rely upon their own strength to carry on the Government and restore prosperity to the country. They can expect nothing but clamor and criticism from the Democracy. Under such circumstances they must take courage and unhesitatingly press through the measures which they have devised for the good of the nation. This short session is no time for discussion. There is no question now pending which has not been talked threadbare. The Senate Finance bill should be passed at once. The appropriations should be made with all the promptitude possible, consistent with prudence. The occurrences in the South during the last few weeks demonstrate the necessity of some further legislation to protect Republican citizens, both white and black, in their civil rights. Those who have doubted such necessity heretofore can doubt it no longer. The spirit of mob-law runs riot over the whole South. There is no leaven of a Republican form of government left in the ranks of Southern Democrats. No person is recognized by the Democracy there as a citizen or as possessing the right to hold office who does not vote the Democratic ticket. This sentiment demands practical correction. That correction must be applied by the Republican party. Hence we say that it is the duty of the Republicans in Congress to recognize this condition of things at once, and assuming the full resposibility of the situation, proceed to legislate accordingly. The time for temporizing has passed. The cloven foot of the Opposition is fully exposed. The avowed sympathy of the Democracy with the spirit of mob law, whether it appears in the shape of "Ku-Klux Klans." "White Leagues." or "Tax-pavers' Leagues. should determine the question of duty with all true patriots beyond peradven-

SUBSIDIARY SILVER COINAGE. PRACTICAL EFFECT OF THE SENATE FINANCE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5, 1875. To the Editor of the National Republi Sin: The Alla California of the 25th ult. con tains a leading editorial on the Senate finance bill, and among its conclusions arrives at the following in relation to the provision for silver redemption of the fractional currency:

This mass of redundant paper is to continue to be legal tender freedemable in gold (which is 12 per cent. premium.) for four years, while silver is to be put in circulation immediately to the extent of $50,000,000 in substitution of fractions. Now, gold being 12 per cent. pre mium and silver 8 per cent. premium, there presents itself a profit of 8 per cent. for the brokers to buy up and export the coin as fast as the Government pays it out. Thus $1,000 legal tender may be bought for $895 gold. When the Treasury pays out $1,000 silver for $1,000 paper fractions, the holder of the paper will get $975 worth of silver for his $895 of gold, making 8 per cent. profit. Of course no silver will remain out; but the fractional cur-rency will, as in 1863, be replaced with nickels, which cost the Government about forty cents on the dollar, and the Treasury and Mints will have a labor of Sysiphus before them. The plan is a renewal of Mr. Richardson's absurdity of two years since. The calculation of the Alta is based upon the assumption that eilver coin is at a premium of per cent., and the conclusion is drawn that it would be exported as rapidly as paid out in the redemption of fractional currency. It must be known to that intelligent and conservative paper that the premium indicated can apply only to the nominal value of the silver coins and not to their bullion value. The supply of such coin has hitherto been insufficient to meet the demand in Texas and other localities. They eigenlate in Texas and Central America at their nominal value. This excess of demand over supply has enabled the New York brokers to maintain the premium referred to. Now, suppose the demand to be fully met, will it not follow that for purposes of export these coins must be re worth about $1.13 per ounce, they will bring about $900 per $1,000; and not $975, as stated by the Alta ! When the market price of silver is 112 cents per ounce standard, the bullion or export value of a dollar in subsidiary silver coins is exactly 90 cents, while the gold value of the currency dollar, with gold at 12 cents pre minm, is 89 2.10 cents. With these rates and exchange at par, it will scarcely be contended by any one that the coins could be exported at a profit. Freight, insurance and brokerage would more than balance the triffing dif-

garded simply as bullion, and as such, being ference of 8-10 of a cent between the gold value of the silver and paper dollar. Suppose the Government had $15,000,000 of subsidiary sliver coin ready for issue, and the mints coining such pieces at the rate of $1,500,000 per month, is it at all probable that the demand from two or three of the least important of the South American States would not soon be met! If so, the coins would circulate in the United States until they could be exported at a profit as bullion, and such a condition of affairs would not arise unless there should be a material advance in the price of silver bullion or depreciation of the reamback dollar

At the present rates, the holder of $1,000 in silver coin has 803% ounces of standard silver bullion, and which, for export as bullion, are worth $900, and not $975, as the Alta endeav ors to show.

Silver coins to the amount of $500,000 could not be sold at this time in New York city for anything above their bullion value, and for the reason that the sum mentioned would more than meet any demand for such coins as money It will not matter much if two or three millions of the subsidiary coins go to Central or

South America annually, as it-would have no perceptible effect on the value here, provided redemption be commenced with a sufficient stock of coin on hand and the mints are operated to their full capacity. The plan, says the Alta, "is a renewal of Mr. Richardson's absurdity." Now, let us see what the plan of Mr. Richardson was. At the time of the Jay Cooke & Co. panie, and for some time thereafter, silver bullion was a drug in the markets of this country at from 111 to of fractional currency. It provides for a 11234 cents per standard ounce, the coining rate of silver being 134 4-10 cents per standard ounce. Silver coins were, in point of fact, attainable by the Treasury on more favorable terms than a corresponding sum of greenbacks. Will any fair man say that there would have been anything "absurd" in obtaining silver coin as above indicated, and paying it out over the counter? I apprehend Unfortunately Mr. Richardson permitted himself to be driven from the proper course by the fear of driving in the fractional currency. Had the plan been adhered to, $10,000,000 in cilver coin would be in circulation to-day in the Atlantic and Western States. Mr. Richardson's plan contemplated the circulation of subsidiary silver coins concurrently with fractional notes, while the Senate bill expressly provides for the withdrawal of the fractional currency, and the issue and circulation of silver in its place, and cannot with any degree of fairness be termed a renewal of the Richardson plan.

It will be difficult for the A'ta to point out a single shipment to Europe of such coin during the last eighteen months, and its conclusions are therefore somewhat hasty and incorrect.
